By completing this section, we understand that you are potentially seeking advice on a range of investment products including equities, income products (e.g. term deposits, cash management trusts, unsecured notes, bonds) and hybrid securities (debt and equity). ## 3.10 Important information about investment risks

Your attitude to risk for this account

There is a direct relationship between risk and investment return. Generally the higher the return you require, the higher risk you need to assume and therefore a greater chance your investments will not return/grow as you anticipated.

Equities investment risks

- Market risk the price of all equities can fluctuate for a variety of reasons, not all of which are logical or predictable. There can be periods where the prices of securities go beyond the underlying fundamentals, both above and beyond a 'fair value'. This is particularly so in the short term.
- Economic cycle risk there are times where the economy (internationally or domestically) is growing faster than normal, slowing down, or stagnating. Some companies are tied to these cycles (cyclical stocks), while others have the ability to grow independently of the economy cycle (growth stocks).
- Timing risk this is the risk of buying and selling investments at the wrong time, particularly when there is a major change in investing conditions and markets. Timing risk is greater when you have a shorter time frame and market conditions may not always coincide with your investment needs.
- Sector specific risk each industry sector has unique features in terms of the exposure to the economic cycle, input material prices, competition, new technology, capital requirements, currency moves, government regulation, etc. This can make each sector more or less attractive at different stages of market and economic conditions.
- Company specific risk there are many factors that influence the performance of a company within an overall market and sector. These include management quality, competition in their field, their level of debt, business mix, location, etc. This can lead to much higher or lower risk and return than other similar companies.
- Liquidity risk this is a risk of not being able to sell your investments at a time and price of your choosing. Smaller stocks may not have the consistent trade volume to enable to transact easily and this may not coincide with your specific capital
- 7. Speculative share risk speculative companies are new or start-up companies that do not have a history of profitability, or are engaged in new ventures where success cannot be guaranteed. They typically consume capital and may often seek additional capital from their shareholders or the broader market. If they are successful they can deliver very high returns, but their risk of failure and capital loss is much higher than more established companies.

Fixed interest investment risks

Fixed interest is the common name applied to an asset class of securities which focus on income and includes investment types such as term deposits, bonds, preference shares, hybrid securities and debt securities. Despite the name 'fixed' interest, this asset class can have income returns which change with market conditions.

- Unique features this is the risk of not understanding the different types of fixed interest investments; no two fixed interest products are the same. Be very careful that you understand all of the features of each fixed income product.
- Credit risk this is the risk that the underlying company issuing the income security may fail to meet income payments, or return capital to the investor in accordance with the agreed terms and conditions. The investment return required from a security issuer should recognise the risks involved in investing in them.
- Interest rates this is the risk that rising or falling interest rates may impact your fixed interest investments. Holding fixed interest investments may result in negative returns when interest rates are rising and the income is insufficient to offset capital losses.
- Duration risk this is the risk that the investment timeframe does not match your personal timeframe. Some securities have specific end dates, while others may have no end date (perpetual securities). This can have an impact on the market price of the security.
- Liquidity risk if a market is illiquid it will be very difficult to buy or sell the security without adjusting the capital price paid or received for the security significantly, creating a wide bid-offer spread.

3.11 Your investment objectives

Which of the following categories do you consider to be the most relevant to your needs and objectives?

Please indicate your preferred investment objective/risk weightings for this account. Ensure total equals 100%. IMPORTANT: The investment objectives you choose need to be in line with the risk that you are prepared to accept. Please consult with your adviser to make sure they are appropriate for you.

Investment/Risk Profile Weighting %

Capital preservation

In order to protect my capital value, I accept a lower return on my portfolio. I require an ongoing, low risk income stream and understand that the after tax returns may be low and may not keep pace with inflation. My portfolio is unlikely to include many listed equities.

Income – below average appetite for capital risk

I mainly want to receive income from my share portfolio and would like a higher income return than offered by cash and term deposits. I want to use fixed interest securities and shares to boost the income return of my portfolio and I accept that they increase the capital risk in order to do so. My portfolio is likely to include fixed income products, hybrid equities and equities in market leaders with a record of paying regular, reliable dividends.

Income and growth - medium risk appetite

I want both income and growth. I understand that growth assets will always form part of the portfolio and I am prepared to accept some capital risk. I am looking for a diversified portfolio of both equities and fixed interest investments.

I want to grow the value of my portfolio over the medium and long term and am willing to take on additional investment risk to do so. I understand returns in the short-term may be volatile. My portfolio will have a stronger skew to growth investments looking for higher capital growth.

Medium Risk

High growth - high risk appetite

I want better than market growth and am prepared to take on greater investment risk and return in order to achieve this. I am prepared to sacrifice portfolio balance to achieve this and understand my portfolio may include less liquid small stocks, cyclical stocks and stocks that have had volatile historical returns. Security of capital is secondary to the potential for wealth creation.

Short term trading – very high risk appetite with a short-term view

I want to invest for the short-term in order to make capital gains on undervalued opportunities or market movements. I expect to buy and sell more frequently than longer term investors, and am willing to take on increased capital and timing risk to do so.

Speculation - extremely high risk appetite

I want to invest in speculative companies that have little track record or profitability, for the purpose of making significant potential capital gains. I understand investing in these products may pose a high risk to my investment capital. Investments may also include the use of warrants and other listed derivatives.

Leverage - varying levels of risk depending on purpose and instrument. Generally higher risk

Leverage provides the potential to make higher returns from a smaller initial outlay. Leverage significantly increases risk. Leverage instruments include options, warrants or margin lending facilities. Only suitable for experienced investors who fully understand the risks, rewards and obligations attached to particular leverage instruments.
